Dad decided so, and dad nows best. How, though, could he have shot. Gene? I have pondered over this, pondered alone, for until to-day no one talked to me of it. I know that dad was a mystery. But this would not have caused him to do what I can but know he did. I guess that he saw that his hopes were blasted, and that I would give up my career. Who knows? What prompted him to shoot must have been something I know nothing of. As yet, I have not heard what Gene said to dad. Perhaps when I know, I will understand."

Before the youthful Mrs. Newman long as possible, in view of the fall campaign.

When discussion of the interstate trade commission bill was resumed in the Senate. Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts, said he opposed it chiefly on the ground that it would be enormously expensive. He objected to all the trust bills because in his opinion there is no public demand for such legislation.

Senator Brandegee insisted the bill was so imperfect that it only authorized the commission to find business men gullty, and made no provisions as to finding, should investigation show their methods were fair.

Ference with the New Haven officials looking to an adjustment of the difficulty which might prevent the suit coming to trial.

No steps have yet been taken toward the formulation of criminal charges. In fact, all the defendants have not yet been served with papers in the equity suit.

It was learned to-day that the State of Massachusetts is insisting on its right to purchase the Boston and Maine stock because of fear that the Canadian lavestigation show their methods were fair.
